Long term trends: How to compare data collected from January 2016 onwards with data collected in December 2015 and before

The introduction of a new data processing approach in January 2016 had an impact, albeit small, on the reported estimates for trips, nights and expenditure.

This change also impacted trends and the ability to conduct long-term analysis. Therefore caution should be taken when comparing data from January 2016 onwards with data in December 2015 and before. Where relevant, trend breaks have been clearly marked either with asterisk or a dotted line to indicate where users should be cautious.

As 2016 and 2017 use the same data processing approach, 2017 data can be compared to 2016 data without any concern. Similarly collected any data before December 2015 can be compared with any other data collected prior to December 2015 without any concern.

Weather

Context

- July was a month of varied weather with only brief fine spells. Temperatures were generally close to the long-term average, and sunshine was near or slightly below normal for the month. Rainfall was above average for much of the country - from the 21st it was wet and quite cool, with some heavy rain at times, particularly in the south.

Note about these results:

The GB Tourism Survey is a survey of British residents, in which 2000 respondents are interviewed each week, making a total of 100,000 each year.

Any respondent having taken one or more overnight trips in the previous 4 week period is asked to describe the details of trips taken. Each year, data from around 17,000 trips is collected, and this is subsequently grossed up to provide population estimates. Full details of the survey methodology can be found at: <https://www.visitbritain.org/archive-great-britain-tourism-survey-overnight-data>

On an annual basis, the survey is extremely robust, with a confidence level for England data at +/- 3% at the 95% level for the number of trips and nights measured, and +/- 4% for the expenditure figure.

For shorter time periods and for other subsets of the data such as region or trip purpose, the margin of error is wider – guidance on confidence intervals at national and regional level for annual and quarterly data is provided on the next page.
